She only knew him from [REDACTED] him in her role as a [REDACTED] employee. They were at a party with about 20 or 30 people on High Street, and he kept putting drinks in her hand. At the party he dragged her arm and dragged her into the kitchen, she was a little uncomfortable but not scared. He dropped his pants and was in his boxers. When [REDACTED] left the party, [REDACTED] followed her out. [REDACTED] states that he forced her to kiss him, grabber her hair when she pushed against him, and forced him to kiss her again. When he asked why she wouldn't go

		home with him, she says she [REDACTED] him a month ago and it wouldn't be professional. He went back inside. His personality was "flipping like a light switch." He pulled [REDACTED] onto a bed in the corner. She elbowed him off her and walked away. [REDACTED] kept calling himself a "little bitch" for crying. [REDACTED] was trying to get to the door and [REDACTED] cornered her again. When [REDACTED] said she was leaving, he kept grabbing her waist. He insisted on walking her home and kept grabbing her hair, waist, hand and buttocks. As they walked, [REDACTED] kept pulling his pants down and would pull them back up when someone else came near them. On the walk [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] passed her friend [REDACTED] - [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] that he had too much to drink, and walked with them to BT, where [REDACTED] left. Sue and [REDACTED] discussed options of support for [REDACTED] and she would like a no contact order. She wants [REDACTED] to be held accountable for what he did. She doesn't want him doing that to anyone else.
